

Linear quantization is a popular scheme however it is not suitable for audio communication. Due to constant quantization error for all the samples, it creates the problem of non-constant signal-to-noise ratio SNR. Since small signals see the same quantization error as the large signals. Therefore, non-uniform or non-linear quantization is employed to resolve this issue. The result is a constant SNR for all the samples and much clear audio.

